On the evening of November 20, 1986, you called me to discuss our daughter, Katrina Marie Milam. This is to confirm that telephone conversation, in which you voluntarily stated that you no longer want me to give you money in support of our daughter. Accordingly, the payment which I made on October 25, 1986, for the month of November, 1986, will be the last payment I will make.

Sincerely,

Dear Brenda

Here's the stuff they "didn't serve" on me, and the list I promised you.

I have some questions:

1. I did a quick calculation assuming (worst case) that Lorita stayed on welfare continuously for 12 years. I don't expect that to happen, but the answer came out close to $100,000. If that's accurate, it makes me a little nervous. Might a really big lien snap them out of their lethargy, and motivate them to take my house away from me? Should I do something like homesteading the place? (Whatever that means.)
2. Perhaps I'm being foolish, and you may correct me if I'm wrong, but I have this opinion that if I fail to object to their judgment, I'll be in effect consenting to it. I take my obligations very seriously, and I don't want to feel obligated in this case. Might a written objection to the judgment provoke them to pursue me more fiercely than would normally be the case? How bullet-proof is their apathy?
3. May I have one of your business cards?

I appreciate your help, and I'm prepared to pay you for the trouble you've taken for me. Please let me know if you decide that's appropriate.

Sincerely,

Sam A. Milam III
